Download the latest software for your Mac â the Yamaha Studio Manager.. . .The mysterious island of Santa Cruz is known throughout the world for its beautiful beaches, lush jungles, and for the mythical and majestic Galápagos islands. But new data, analysis and discoveries have shed new light on the secrets of the sea. This site contains a lengthy article with findings and analysis of scientists on the Galapagos that received an amazing combined total of nearly $170 million from the National Geographic Society. The big news comes in the form of this report, where the global readership of National Geographic Magazine gets the scoop on what the scientists found in the Galapagos. You should definitely read the article if you are a Galapagos tourist, but the article is also fascinating from a scientific standpoint. What you will find out in this report is the truth about life under the Galapagos sea. Some of the scientists found parts of the Galapagos that were previously thought to be uninhabitable due to some kind of underwater extinction event. While the entire coast of the Galapagos is slowly releasing its bounty of fish and other forms of sea life, and the three main islands are slowly restoring, the scientists also pinpointed new areas of interest and showed that the underwater biodiversity is still thriving. The biggest and most surprising finding
